The best grade of chickens, not dressed, can be gotten wholesale for from 10 to 12 cents per pound, which means that they should sell for from 12 to 15 cents per pound retail.

Prices for turkeys are even better in comparison. All grades of turkeys are row selling wholesale at 13 cents per pound. This means that the consumer should be able to get the best at 14 to 16 cents a pound. When these figures are compared with the 20 and 26 cents which consumers paid for the same grade for their Thanksgiving turkeys, Cormick's guest for several uays, and cutcome of these confabs is that Penn and Princeton are nearer to closing the breach than ever before.

Both Princeton and Pennsylvania need the game.

With all due respect to Michigan Penn is not very strong about taking a trip to the West if the schedule can be acceptably filled with Eastern attractions. The expense incurred by both colleges is large and the receipts are not as great as they would be from a Princeton-Penn game. Princeton does not like the Indian game at New York. The Tigers think it savers too much of show business and not enough of sportsmanlike contest as should be the case. A game with Penn would be purely an intercollegiate contest played on a college ground and before a college crowd. So, both Penn and Princeton would profit in several ways by a game.
